How do you use assessment to drive your instruction

Category | Formative assessment There is no shortage of formative assessment strategies, techniques, and tools available to teachers who use formative instructional practice in their classrooms. Here is an extensive list of 75 digital tools, apps, and platforms that can help you and your students use formative assessment to elicit evidence of learning. We didn't just add any old tool to this list. Here are the criteria we used for those that made the cut: Supports formative instructional strategies and ways to activate learners to be resources for themselves and peers Is free or awful close to it (under $10 per year, where possible) Allows both students and teachers to take the activator role when possible (sometimes teachers need to get things started) Before you dig into the tools, I encourage you to spend some time thinking about exactly what you want to accomplish with your students. "How to pick the right digital tool: Start with your learning goal" by Erin Beard can help you wrap your head around goals and guide you in choosing the best tool for the task. "27 easy formative assessment strategies for gathering evidence of student learning" can help you decide what strategies work best for you and your students. Record audio and video Animoto Gives students the ability to make a 30-second video of what they learned in a lesson. AudioNote A combination of a voice recorder and notepad, it captures both audio and notes for student collaboration. Edpuzzle Helps you use video (your own, or one from Khan Academy, YouTube, and more) to track student understanding. Flipgrid Lets students use 15-second to 5-minute videos to respond to prompts. Teachers and peers can provide feedback. QuickVoice Recorder Allows you to record classes, discussions, or audio for projects. Sync your recordings to your computer easily for use in presentations. Vocaroo Creates audio recordings without the need for software. Embed the recording into slideshows, presentations, or websites. WeVideo Lets you use video creatively to engage students in learning. Teachers and students alike can make videos. Create quizzes, polls, and surveys Crowdsignal Lets you create online polls, quizzes, and questions. Students can use smartphones, tablets, and computers to provide their answers, and information can be culled for reports.
